Hello, everyone. Today I'd like to talk about the differences between Chinese students and English students.

In China, students are more outgoing. They study harder and have much more homework to do. In England, students are more serious and quieter. But they are better at sports and they like taking part in all kinds of parties. What's more, Chinese students like eating more vegetables and fruit. English students like to have more meat. As for hobbies, 30% of Chinese students like reading books. They watch TV four or five times a week. 70% go online on the weekend. However, 60% of English students play soccer every day, 40% like drawing. Most of the English students go to the cinema once a week.

Though they are different, they can talk about and share something they like.
