阅读下面短文, 从短文所给的 A、B、C、D 四个选项中选出能填入相应空白处的最佳选项, 并在答题卡上将相应的字母编号涂黑。(共 10 小题, 每小题 1 分)

I stood there listening to my father shout at top of his voice.

“Which one of you did this?” We all 1 down at the step. There was a child’s handwriting in chalk there. I was so 2. I hope no one could see it. “Would he 3 it was me?” I was so scared. When he asked me, I lied, “Not me, Dad.”

The others denied (否认) it as well. Of course, we all knew that one of us must have done it. But as the youngest and smallest of the three, I just couldn’t find courage to tell the 4.

To find out who had written on the 5, father gave us each a piece of paper and a pencil. “I want each of you to write 6 what you see on the step.”

I tried my best to write the words differently. I didn’t want Dad to be able to tell it was me. He 7 our pieces of paper and looked at them. “Since none of you will admit to having done it, then I will 8 you all.” I stood there and said nothing.

The last thing that I 9 was for dad to punish me!

“I did it.” My sister stepped forward and said she had done something she hadn’t. She was grounded (被罚不准出门) for a month.

I didn’t tell my dad it was really me until many years later. I always felt 10 because of it. That was the last time I let anyone take the blame (承受责罚) for me.

I believe in the power of inspiration (激励). I like playing basketball. However, when I played in the boy's club, I didn't think I could do well in it. If somebody passed the ball to me, I would quickly pass the ball to another teammate. I dared (敢于) not shoot the ball myself. I was afraid that I would miss the shot and be laughed at by my teammates. I watched basketball games and felt the excitement of the players right after they made the shot. "Those feelings wouldn't be the same," I thought.

One day, I asked for some advice from my best friend about what team I should join. "Should I try out for basketball or wrestling?" She asked, "Don't you love basketball?" I sadly replied, "Yeah, but I was never good at it." She looked at me with disbelief, "Yes, you are!" I looked at her skeptically, "Am I?" Then she said these words, "If I love something, I will keep doing what I love to do so that I can get better." Her words inspired me.

I decided to join another club to play basketball. What my friend had said stood in my mind. My teammate passed the ball to me. I received the ball and took a shot. I made it. As soon as I made the shot, I felt the excitement of an NBA player. My successful play was unforgettable. I'll never forget that day.

I believe that everybody has something he or she loves, and inspiration will lead you there if you have trouble. People need to be inspired to find their passion. Their passion will most likely help them to achieve greater things in life, and to be the best people they can be.
