Durer, a Germany artist, drew a very famous painting called Praying Hands. Who did the hands belong to? It is said that there is a touching story behind it.

When Durer was young, he and his elder brother both wanted to study painting, but their family couldn't afford them. They thought of an idea. They would throw a coin. The winner would go to art school. The loser would go to the mines (矿井) and make money to support the winner.

The coin was thrown into the air. Both Durer and his brother were very nervous. Who would win? The result was that Durer won. He went to art school and studied very hard. Also because of his talent for painting, he became famous after several years. It was time for him to repay his brother.

When Durer went back home, he held his brother's hands. "My dear brother, now it is your turn. You can go to art school, and I support you!"

His brother sighed (叹气), "No...No, brother. Look at my hands. Working in the mines made my hands deformed. I can't paint any more. It's too late for me."

"Grandma, I'm home!" Denzel shut the door behind him, dropped his heavy schoolbag on the sofa, and headed straight for the kitchen, as he always did after school.

"Grandma?" Denzel called, surprised she wasn't standing in the kitchen preparing dinner. "She must be upstairs," he thought to himself, so he took an apple, and began to do his homework.

Feeling nervous, he decided to check upstairs for her. Her door was halfway open, so he quietly knocked and pushed it open. "Grandma?" Denzel said softly.

"Grandma!" Denzel shouted with fear in his voice. Denzel noticed his grandmother lying on the floor next to her bed. In no time, he ran to her side to check on her.

Just weeks before, a paramedic had visited Denzel's health class at school, and he had talked about what to do in case of an emergency (紧急情况) just like this one. Denzel remembered what he had learned and jumped into action. When his grandmother did not respond, Denzel ran to the phone and called 911.

A dispatcher (调度员) calmed Denzel and asked him to stay on the line while he waited for the paramedics to arrive. As they waited, the dispatcher gave Denzel some instructions and asked him to perform CPR (心肺复苏). Thankfully, the paramedic had taught his class how to do CPR during the class visit!

The paramedics arrived quicker than Denzel had expected, and they began taking care of his grandmother and took her to the hospital.

One of the paramedics pulled Denzel aside. "Your grandma is very lucky to have you," she said. "You are a hero." But Denzel didn't really feel like a hero. He just did what he needed to do.

51. What did Denzel's grandma usually do when he got home? _____

- A. She helped him with his schoolbag. B. She gave an apple to him.
C. She waited for him on the sofa. D. She prepared dinner for him.

52. Where did Denzel find his grandma? _____

- A. In the kitchen. B. In her room. C. In his school. D. In the hospital.

53. Who has the similar job as "a paramedic"? _____

- A. A nurse. B. A cleaner. C. A journalist. D. A pilot.

54. What is the right order of Denzel's actions on that day? _____

- ① He performed CPR. ② He called his grandma as usual.
③ He called 911 for help. ④ He checked upstairs for his grandma.

A. ②③④① B. ②④③① C. ④②①③ D. ④③①②

55. What can best describe Denzel? _____

- A. Shy. B. Honest. C. Bright. D. Friendly.

D

How nice are you? Do you give money to homeless people? Do you offer your seat to someone in need on a bus?

Many people believe that confident people think more highly of themselves, while those who have low self-esteem (自尊) think less of their good qualities. However, a new study says it might not be true, reported The Guardian.

The study was done by Jonathan Freeman, a psychology professor from the University of London, UK. He found that 98 percent of British people consider themselves to be among the nicest 50 percent of the population. In the study, Freeman first asked some people to rate (评级) their own niceness. Then he got people to answer questions like "Do you give directions to strangers?" and "Have you ever donated blood?" The results showed that people are not as nice as they think they are. Two thirds of them seldom helped others carry heavy shopping bags, and only a quarter of them donated blood.

In another study by psychologists from universities in Chicago and Virginia, US, some people were shown pictures of themselves. Some pictures had been more or less changed to make them appear more attractive. When asked to pick the unchanged pictures, people usually chose the more attractive ones.

So, why do we think we're nicer than we actually are? There are many theories (理论). A popular one says we cheat ourselves unknowingly, so that we can get confidence without lying to ourselves knowingly.

How can we solve it? Other studies show that there is a simple way: feedback (反馈). Compare others' opinion toward yourself with your own and you will see a clearer picture.

56. What did the new study find? _____

- A. Confident people have more good qualities. B. People with low self-esteem are mostly not nice.
C. People are not as nice as they think they are. D. Confident people don't like those with low-esteem.

57. Which of the following is NOT true? _____

- A. Freeman is a British psychology professor.
B. About 98 percent of British people think they're nice people.
C. The people answered some questions about niceness.
D. One fourth of the people helped others carry heavy bags.

58. According to Para 4, people chose the more attractive pictures of themselves because _____.

- A. they were not happy with their looks B. it was hard to tell small differences
C. they lied to themselves without knowing it D. they wanted to learn to make up

59. What does the story mainly talk about? _____

- A. Don't lie to yourself. B. People's opinion of their own niceness.
C. Let's help others more. D. Compare yourself with others.

60. Where does the passage most probably come from? _____

- A. A magazine. B. A grammar book. C. A dictionary. D. A story book.
