A

The day came. Grandma was moving out of her big house. I was sad. I had a lot of memories in that house.

I asked where Grandma was moving to. My dad said, "Somewhere near us. Don't worry."

But I was worried. I spent a lot of time with Grandma. In fact, I wanted to see her more.

I thought no one wanted to tell me, because they knew I would be sad. "It must be far away," I said to myself.

We put all of Grandma's things in the truck. I sat beside her in the car. On the way, we talked a lot.

After a while, we arrived. I saw her new house.

It was our house! Grandma was coming to live with us.

Peng Shilu was born in a family of heroes in Haifeng, Guangdong in 1925. When he was less than five years old, his parents died. The young boy was taken care of and protected by the poor, and he moved between different families and lived a difficult life. The people's kindness influenced him deeply at his early age

In 1940, Peng Shilu was taken to Chongqing. Later, with the help of the CPC (中国共产党), he went to study in Yan'an. In 1951, he went abroad to learn chemical engineering. When he completed his studies, he got an excellent grade

In 1956, Peng Shilu was asked, "Are you willing to change your research field?"

"Of course, as long as the motherland has a need!"

With the strong belief (信念), Peng Shilu began to study nuclear power (核能) at once. In the early 1960s, China's development of nuclear submarines (核潜艇) was almost a "blank". Peng Shilu and other scientists were learning, exploring and practicing. In 1970, China's first nuclear submarine was built. In 1974, China became the fifth country in the world to have a nuclear submarine

Peng Shilu worked very hard. He spent all his life on nuclear power. "I have only done two things in my life. One is to build nuclear submarines and the other is to build nuclear power stations," said Peng Shilu

He died on March 22, 2021, at the age of 96. As a pioneer in nuclear power, he is remembered by the people and the country. On March 3, 2022, he was named "Touching China's Figure of the Year 2021"
