Once there was a teenage boy who was known as a fast runner in his village. He dreamed of being more successful and only 16 winning every race.

One day, the boy took part in a running race in his village. He won the 200, 100 and 50-meter races without any 17. He was proud of himself and received great applause (掌声).

18 his grandfather stepped in and challenged him to a race with two unexpected competitors, an old man and a blind girl. The boy 19 it was unbelievable but accepted.

In the race the boy finished first while the old man and the blind girl were still at the starting line. With joy he waved (挥) his hands at the crowd. But 20 kept silent.

"Why don't people give applause for me like before?" he asked his grandfather.

"Start the race again with them. But this time you should win the game by 21 them to cross the finish line with you at the same time." the grandfather replied.

The boy was 22 but agreed to the race.

During the second race, the boy took the hands of the old man and the blind girl and walked 23 with them to the finish line. The crowd gave them a standing applause.

The boy asked his grandfather, "24 whom are the people applauding? Is it for me or them?"

The grandfather smiled and said, "The crowd did not applaud for any one of you. They applauded for 25 you all ran the race together."

Wu Lidi, a 48-year-old cleaning lady, has a great interest in painting. Recently, she was surprised and deeply moved by a special show of her painting works held by students at Nanjing University.

The paintings were Wu's works on a blackboard hanging on the first floor of a student dormitory (宿舍) where she works. The paintings included wonderful natural scenes, the colorful school and so on.

During the show, many students left handwritten messages to Wu. The messages included "Thank you for your blackboard paintings that have accompanied (陪伴) me through four years of my youth", "You have created a wonderful world with your painting brush" and "I hope you will stick to what you love".

Wu has had an interest in painting since she was young. After she became a cleaner at Nanjing University, she started painting on a blackboard. Though she is very busy at work, she still tries to find time to create blackboard paintings. She also learns and practices painting skills from online videos in her free time. She is widely known by the students. They often call her "a cleaning lady who could have become an artist".

Wu said, "I love painting, so I'm happy to do it. I want to give the students a different feeling, and hope they will feel happy when they see the paintings."

Wu is thankful to the students who held the show for her. And she will continue to create more paintings that will accompany every lovely student.

C. Quiet and kind. D. Helpful and funny.
32. What can be the best title for the passage?
- A. A Colorful School Life B. An Artist's Wonderful Dream
C. A Cleaning Lady's Spring D. A University Student's Show

When my daughter was in primary school, she brought home four small twigs (嫩枝) from school to plant. None of them looked very hardy, but with hope for the future, I planted them somewhere in our backyard that had enough sunlight. Over the years, because of the poor soil (土壤), three of them died. Only one was alive.

It grew very slowly. And it didn't look like a tree because it was only a little taller than the grass in my backyard. Later, I found that it was starting to die. Most leaves of the poor plant were turning yellow and falling down. Only the top third of the tree was still green. I did my best to save it by feeding it a lot of fertilizer (肥料), but it didn't work.

Later one morning, I went out and looked at it again. I was wondering if it would be better to just cut it down. It would make the yard look cleaner. As I walked over to take a closer look at it, however, I noticed something moving within the leaves. It was a bird carefully building a nest in the topmost branches. I smiled when I looked at it. I thought maybe this old tree was still useful. It might not be healthy or pretty, but it was still giving a bird a home.

This tree reminded me that all of our lives have a purpose. It doesn't matter if we are young and healthy or old and sick. Until our last breath, we have things to do, love to give, and joy to share. We can help to make this world a better and more beautiful place.

33. According to Paragraph 1, three of the trees died from ▲.

- A. little sunlight B. poor soil C. heavy rainstorms D. freezing weather

34. Which of the following is the right order according to the passage?

- ① I was planning to cut the tree down.
② The only living tree was starting to die.
③ I found a nest in the tree and changed my mind.
④ I planted four twigs somewhere in our backyard.

- A. ②①③④ B. ③④①② C. ④②①③ D. ④②③①

35. We can infer from the underline sentence that the writer felt ▲ at that time.

- A. afraid B. surprised C. worried D. strange

36. In the story, the writer want to tell us that ▲.

- A. animals need to be cared by humans
B. we should work hard to make a better life
C. all of our lives have meanings to the world
D. planting trees is not as easy as we think

Odinn Meehan has an unusual illness. He is too sick to go to school but new robot technology — Odinn 2.0 — has allowed him to be back in class.

Odinn, an eight-year-old boy, studies at Rainworth State School in Queensland Australia. He was found to have a disease called juvenile dermatomyositis (幼年型皮炎) or JDM last year. He hasn't been able to go to school since March last year when he started to feel sick. He has had lots of tests, treatments (疗法) and stays in hospital.

Being away from his school and his classmates was getting Odinn down. "Odinn is a happy kid and he loves school," his mother, Romy Willing, said. "For a very social child, he was lonely without his friends." He was learning with the help of the workers at Queensland Children's Hospital when he was receiving treatments, but it wasn't the same.

Luckily, there is MissingSchool, a non profit (非营利的) group. It began 11 years ago, when three mothers were looking for answers for their own seriously sick children. Since 2017, MissingSchool has been using robots in schools across Australia. They connect seriously sick kids with their normal classroom. It now has more than 180 robots in schools, connecting about 5,400 classmates.

Now Odinn can take classes at home, with Odinn 2.0 in the classroom. The robot has wheels at the bottom, a thin body and a screen as its head. Odinn's happy face is shown on the screen. He controls the robot using his computer. As the robot goes through the space between his classmates' desks, he waves to his friends. It is like he is right there in the classroom.

37. Which of the following is TRUE about Odinn?

- A. He has been ill for almost three years.
- B. He felt upset and lonely without friends.
- C. He refused to have tests or treatments in hospital.
- D. He didn't get any help with his study from others.

38. The underlined word "They" in Paragraph 4 refers to "▲".

- A. the mothers
- B. the children
- C. the schools
- D. the robots

39. The last paragraph is mainly about the ▲ of using Odinn 2.0.

- A. problem
- B. time
- C. way
- D. rule

40. The passage is most probably from the part of ▲ in a magazine.

- A. Technology
- B. Health
- C. Travel
- D. Culture
