Kate rides to school every day on her bike. Two days ago, she left home very late. It was a cold, windy autumn day. It was raining, and the road was wet. As she was coming up to the traffic lights, they suddenly turned red. Kate was going too fast and she couldn't stop her bike. She knocked into the back of a car, fell off her bike and hurt her arm. Luckily the bike wasn't broken, but she couldn't ride her bike any longer. She had to walk to school. When she got to school, it was 9:00 o'clock. She was late for half an hour.

How to Make Our Weekends More Meaningful

Life on weekends is an important part of our daily life. How can we make our weekends more meaningful? Here are some of my suggestions.

First of all, the weekend is a great time for family to get together. It's good to help our parents do some housework. That can help us understand each other better and show our love for them. Secondly, we should spend time developing our interests and hobbies at the weekend. For example, I would like to choose some books to read and communicate with others after reading. Thirdly, we can take part in volunteering activities, like visiting the old people's home or doing some cleaning in public places. Last but not least, to make ourselves healthier, taking exercise is a good choice.

In short, let's make good use of our weekends!
