A

It was my first day at school. I felt nervous. I went to all my classes with no friends. I felt like no one cared about me.

I listened carefully to all the lessons and waited for lunch time at one o'clock. Finally, the bell rang. It was time to talk and have fun. In the lunch line, I met a new friend from Saudi Arabia(沙特阿拉伯), and though I am Jewish(犹太人), we got along well. I was so happy when she said, "Sit with us at our table." She pointed to the one next to the door.

So I agreed. I took my dish and was going to walk with her across the floor, when someone suddenly stopped me. "Hey, I saw you on the bus, " said a tall girl in a long skirt. "I see your Jewish star necklace(项链). You should sit with us. "

At that moment , I looked around. The Spanish only sat with other Spanish, the Russians always with Russians and never the Arabs with Jews.

I knew why the war(战争) started. Everyone sticks to (坚持)his or her own kind. The lunchroom was like a map of the world. Why was everyone so blind?

I didn't go with this tall girl, but went with the first, and she was friendly to me. I built a bridge between two worlds when I sat with those different from me.

B

I spent 18 days in Stuttgart,Germany,for an exchange（交流）when I was 16. I went to school by bike every day, and spent the evening with my host family. My speaking skills had been improved a lot because I had to speak German all the time.

----Ellen

Once I went on an exchange with my class for a week in Madrid, Spain. It was good to be in a place where I just had to use my language skills. It also helped me learn a lot of Spanish that people use when they're speaking in everyday life. Sometimes I felt very tired, but I enjoyed the exchange.

----Frank

Last year, I went to France for an exchange. I stayed with my host family in a small town just outside Paris for one month. I love French and my level has always been good. But the exchange really helped develop my speaking skills, and made me a much more confident person. It felt great to be able to talk with native（当地的）French people.

Dereck and Beverly are wildlife animal filmmakers(电影制片人).They have made lots of films about animals and plants. Their job is to keep and protect the big cats of Africa from damage(伤害). Beverly also takes photos of the lions, and her pictures have appeared in National Geographic magazine.

When they were kids, Dereck was quiet and healthy. He was good at maths and science. Beverly had a twin brother. At that time, she and her brother often got their mother into trouble! Beverly was a dancer, an athlete and a class leader. And she could play the piano (not very well). Her favourite subject was science and she always got excellent grades in her science exams.

When in the field,their work starts at around 4 am. After drinking a cup of tea, they drive out into the bush（灌木丛）to find their subjects. Sometimes that is a lion pride（群）. Lions are family animals. They usually live in groups of fifteen or more. Sometimes that is a single leopard(豹). They follow the animals for the day, filming, researching, and collecting facts, information or pictures.They don't stop working even when they have lunch. They are often back in camp by 8 pm.

When talking about the favourite places to explore, Dereck says,“We live in it!” Beverly thinks being in nature is her favourite. Dereck thinks running or taking a swim in the Okavango swamp（沼泽）—especially swimming close to crocodiles（鳄鱼）is great fun, but Beverly says, “Swimming is fun but crazy in these waters!”

Dogs are our friends. With them, we won't be alone. However, dogs can do us even more good than that. They can help children improve their reading skills.

A team of Canadian scientists did an experiment (实验) with 22 boys and 17 girls in grades one through three. They first tested their reading abilities(能力). Then they asked them to read books that were somewhat difficult for them. Each child read aloud. After they finished the first page, scientists asked the children if they would like to read more or just stop there. They found that children spent more time reading and showed more interest when a dog was in the room. Dogs can help children feel more confident, scientists said. Dogs are good listeners. They won't mind if children make mistakes. They won't stop children, either. They only stay quiet by the side of the children.

In recent years, therapy(治疗)dogs have taken part in reading activities in schools and libraries. This study helps us understand how dogs help children learn to read better.
