Dear Uncle Lee,

I need your help. It's about my mother. When she saw me sending short messages to my friend, she became very angry. She thought it was wrong for me to make friends. But I thought it was normal. In the end, we had a quarrel. She was mad at me and we didn't speak to each other. I felt quite sad.

What should I do?

Yours,
Lisa

Dear Lisa,

It's normal to have different thoughts between parents and children. But remember your parents love you deeply and care for you best.

You can make friends. Your mother can't agree with you because she doesn't know your friends well. Why not tell her something about them? What do you often do at school and after school? What are their names? What do their parents do?

You can also share your happiness and sadness with your mother. If so, she must accept your friends. Maybe she can become one of your real friends. Do you think so?

Yours,
Uncle Lee
