C

The weather is getting hot. Would you like to have some cucumber with mashed garlic(蒜泥黄瓜)? When you enjoy this tasty dish, don't forget to say "thanks" to one person—Zhang Qian.

Zhang Qian lived in the Han Dynasty(朝代). He was an early visitor on the Silk Road(丝绸之路) and brought a lot of new foods and other things to China.

The Silk Road was a long road. It was from China to Central Asia(中亚), and even Europe.

Where is this dish from? The cucumber came from South Asia. In early times, Chinese people called it "hugua". "Hu" means "foreign(外国的)". That is to say, it isn't from China. Later, its name is "huanggua". In some places, people also call it "qinggua". What about garlic? Its home was in Central Asia. Zhang Qian brought it to China about 2,000 years ago. Garlic can make many dishes taste better. It kills germs in our body and is good for our health.

What is the Silk Road? The Silk Road was also called "Sweet(甜的) Road". Besides(除了) vegetables, it brought many kinds of tasty fruits to China, too. Do you like grapes? They also came from Central Asia.

Do you ever see the words "hu", "yang", "fan" or "xi" in Chinese names of some foods? These names usually mean these foods do not come from China. For example, "huluobo(carrots)" and "yangcong(onions)". Can you find more?
