Have you ever shown your photos on your favorite social media(媒体)? Or have you expressed your feelings and emotions on your online page? If yes, do you know what you have posted on the social medias can cause problems you could not expect?

Cathy, who is going to be fifteen, posted online an invitation to her birthday party with her address in it. And guess what! 500 people came to the party, and some even broke the windows and plants, making a total mess of the house. The girl's birthday party turned into an awful dream.

Many teenagers think they know everything about social media, and that such a thing could never happen to them. Studies show that each year more than three million young people in the world get into trouble because of their online activities.

So do remember these if you really want to share something online.

Share with care! Not everyone will like what you write online. Think before you post anything. You never know who sees your texts, pictures or videos. Before clicking "post", you should ask yourself, "How will I feel if my family or teachers see this?" and "How might this post be bad for me in five or ten years from now?"

▲ Imagine someone is unfriendly in real life. The same is true of online communication. No one likes it when you "shout" in your messages. If you feel angry or frustrated while you're writing a message, wait a bit. Read it again later and then send it.

Protect and respect! Never share your passwords with anyone. It's not wise to post your home or email address online. Don't say bad things about people. If you get messages like that or see them online, talk to your parents or your teachers.

I'd say none of these things promises 100% online safety, but each will help you to be safer.

It was really a hard decision for us to make. For me, I always wanted my children to go to a private school, like I did. Not because my family is rich, but because I believe that the best education is private. It took years for me to make peace with the fact that my children attended our local public primary school. "They'll go to a private high school," I told myself.

But the fact is that my eldest is now in her last year of primary school, and my husband and I will find our way to afford the private school. If so, I could increase my work hours. My law degree was supposed to be my ticket to a good job and a good pay, but that was just our wishes, not the fact.

During many sleepless nights, I felt troubled by the decision. Although I want the best for my daughter, I have my own dreams too. I can't give up everything for my baby girl. I explain that I want to be a positive(积极的) role model for my daughter, and an unhappy parent is a terrible strain on a family. I point out that even the best private school won't protect my children from disappointment or hard work. And finally, it's decided.

Because I understand it's my family that shaped me instead of my great private school education. I can no longer remember the math problems and what Shakespeare said which I once know so perfectly. The lessons from my family, however, have turned out to be impossible to forget.

Artificial Intelligence(人工智能)(AI) has been changing our lives. But in which ways? Forbes has predicted what development AI can get for 2021.

AI can process huge amounts of data(处理大数据). It can find new medicine for different illnesses. In 2020, AI helped develop COVID-19 vaccines(疫苗). It shortened the development time from 10 years to 10 months. AI also found a special protein structure. This can help scientists make protein-based medicine.

Working from home is not new. But in the near future, we might use AI to create virtual(虚拟的) workspaces. Companies can copy themselves in the digital world. Their workers will work in this virtual company as they work from home.

Smart devices(设备) will be even smarter in the future. With AI, for example, you can have a better shopping experience. Finally, it can even give you a lower price.

AI is the new rising sun in the world. It seems AI is everywhere and makes our lives more interesting.

However, everything has its two sides. That means AI is double-edged-sword. Some people may worry that it will take the place of humans, and we may lose ourselves in the end. But I still believe that when humans use high technology to make a new thing, we must be smarter than it.

Every day, much food is thrown as rubbish. This is common in a school dining hall. Maybe you often notice it, too. What is the big deal?

The food waste problem has caught much attention nowadays. All of us must know the importance of saving food. Some online programs, like "eating shows", show that hosts(主播) eat too much. But after the eating shows, many of the hosts threw up(呕吐) the food they have eaten so that they could keep thin.

Although it's important to respect their freedom, it's a shame to waste food. "Eating show" hosts not only waste food, but also make the idea of wasting things acceptable. Young people may be easily influenced by them. Besides, many students have bad eating habits. Some prefer eating their favorite food and leave the food they don't like in the dishes. Others always order too much food but only eat some of it. As a result, they may throw away some of the food they order at school. They should feel sorry about such behavior, but their favorite "eating show" hosts now make them believe it doesn't matter. At the same time, millions of people across China and the world don't have enough food to eat. The food waste means a lot to them.

Is there anything we can do? We can call on more students to save food that is from the hard-working farmers.
